Selecting the right continence pad

If you are experiencing bladder or bowel leakage problems, you need the most appropriate absorbent and secure pad or pant to draw leakage away from the skin, keeping your skin dry and free from rashes.

Step 1: Calculate the volume of your urine loss

Working capacity is the volume of urine a pad will hold before it is likely to leak and become uncomfortable to wear.

A useful technique is to weigh your absorbent product when it is dry. Prior to changing your product, place it in a plastic bag and weigh with a digital scale in millilitres before disposal. This reading will provide you with an indication of what volume the pad needs to hold.

Urine Loss (leakage)	Working Capacity	Pad packaging shows*
Minor	Less than 100ml	½ – 3
Light	250ml – 500ml	3 – 4
Light to Moderate	500ml – 1000ml	5 – 6
Moderate	1000ml – 1500ml	6 – 7
Moderate to Heavy	1500ml – 2000ml	7
Heavy to Severe	>2000ml	8 – 10

*Indicative as drop and bar levels vary by manufacturer

Step 2: Calculate your size

	XS	S	M	L	XL	2XL	3XL+
Waist (cm)	49-74	56-75	72-122	92-144	133-163	163-178	173-243

Note: Not all products require this measurement

Step 3: Choose products to match your urine loss requirements

Product checklist

- Working capacity
For pads, is the choice based on your volume of urine loss or bowel leakage?
- Duration
How long does the product need to be worn?
- Mobility
Can you change the product on your own or will you need help?
- Gender
Are there male or female options available which better contour to your body shape?
- Personal preferences
Does the product match your needs for comfort, size, colour, style etc?
- Cost
Have you chosen products that match your budget and suit your needs?
- Fit
For pants, is it a firm yet comfortable fit around the waist and legs to effectively absorb and contain leakage and not rub on your skin as you move?

Usage tips

1. Only change your absorbent product when necessary e.g. when it feels damp to touch, and not at a set time. Typically, people use around 4 pads per day.
2. Do not reuse disposable continence pads and pants, as they are designed for single use only.
3. Dispose used pads in a small bag or nappy sack and then discard in your regular household garbage bin. Never attempt to flush any incontinence pads down the toilet.
4. Replace reusable pads and pants every 6 to 12 months to prevent odours from developing.
5. All washable and reusable continence products must follow the manufacturer's washing and drying instructions to maintain the absorbency and life of the product.
6. Use barrier creams sparingly to ensure the absorbency of the continence product is not adversely affected.
7. You can use more than one type or style of pad or pant for different situations e.g. for overnight, a social occasion or sport.
8. Continence pants and all-in-one wrap around (nappy style) products should always fit comfortably around the upper leg to prevent leakage.
9. Continence products must be changed very soon after a bowel motion to prevent skin rashes and irritations occurring.

Stools and Bowel Health

Common names for bowel motions

STOOLS POO
POOP BOWEL ACTIONS
FAECES BOWEL MOVEMENT

What is normal?

- Bowel motions ranging between 3 times a day to 3 times a week
- Ability to hold on after the first urge to open your bowels
- A bowel motion starts as soon as you are seated on the toilet
- Your rectum feels completely empty after a bowel motion
- No straining or pain when passing a bowel motion
- No blood or mucus in your bowel motion

Tips for a healthy digestive system

Timing

Sit on the toilet about 20 minutes after eating a meal to take advantage of your gastrocolic reflex. The gastrocolic reflex will stimulate faeces to move through the large bowel leading to a bowel motion.

Transit Time

The time it takes for ingested food to travel through your gut is between 24-36 hours (if consuming a western diet). If transit time is too slow, bowel motions can become dry and hard. If transit time is too fast, there is more fluid in the bowel and bowel motions can become loose or liquid (diarrhoea).

Fibre

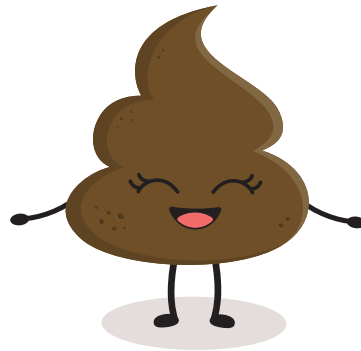

Your fibre intake should be about 25-30g each day to keep the gut healthy.

Fluids

Drink 6-8 glasses of non-caffeinated fluids daily.

Exercise

Stimulate bowel movement with regular gentle exercise.

Toilet Position

Adopt a good toileting position.

Correct Position

- Knees higher and wider than hips
- Lean forward and put elbows on knees
- Bulge out your abdomen
- Straighten your spine
- Avoid straining or holding your breath

Constipation

Your bowel motions are difficult to pass, and you are straining at least 25% of the time. Bowel motions are lumpy and hard at least 25% of the time and you are having less than 3 bowel motions each week. There is a sensation of incomplete emptying of your bowel.

Independence Australia has a large range of laxatives, suppositories and enemas to assist you with the management of your constipation.

Faecal Incontinence

Accidental leakage of a bowel motion. It can be a sign of chronic constipation, diarrhoea or other underlying health issue that needs investigation.

Any ongoing changes in your bowel motions or frequency of your bowel motions should be discussed with your doctor to rule out any serious health issues causing these changes.

Independence Australia has a large range of bowel care products and aids to assist with management of your bowel leakage problems.

- protection (pads, bedsheets)
- anal plugs
- anal irrigation
- disposable pads
- activated charcoal
- skin care to prevent dermatitis

Independence Australia specialises in bowel care related products.

Glossary Terms

All-in-one Nappy Style - All-in-one pads are the traditional nappy style pads with adhesive tabs. These are designed for maximum security. Ideal for people with heavy to severe incontinence.

Booster Pads - A disposable pad with a backing that allows liquid to pass through to the outer continence product, increasing the overall capacity of the product to hold urine.

Disposable Bed Protection - Bed protection solutions available in a variety of sizes. The working capacities vary from 100ml to 2100ml. Ideal for people with light to heavy incontinence.

Enema - A procedure which involves inserting a liquid into the rectum (lower part of the large intestine). Aim is to empty the bowels to allow for an examination, administer medication or to relieve constipation.
